

Litigation Limitation Agreement

Please read the entire document and be sure to ask your therapist about any questions or concerns you may have regarding this document.

Your therapist does not provide court work (e.g., testifying in court regarding custody, divorce, or other legal proceedings).

It is the intention of your treatment provider to protect your information from the potential intrusiveness of legal proceedings, including, but not limited to;

- a) Your legal adversary may be entitled to all of the information revealed in your therapy sessions if you introduce mental status in a legal action.
- b) Your therapist is not a forensic psychology expert. Utilizing a therapist without forensic training could result in harming your case.
- c) Your legal goals may be in conflict with your therapeutic goals.

Any involvement of your therapist in any legal proceeding will necessitate termination of treatment at Rawers Therapy.

Thank you for your understanding. - Rawers Therapy
